"I'D SLAP HIS FACE," SAID MISS LOUISE WHITEHEAD.

Mysterious Woman Dragged Into Case by Hotel Man—Tells How News of Divorce Suit Was Discussed Between Them.

What was expected to be the last day of the celebrated Whitehead divorce case was begun before Justice Beach at 10 o'clock this forenoon.

Lyell Whitehead, a millionaire, is suing his wife, Elizabeth, many years his junior, for absolute divorce, naming John Frederick Thomas, Jr., as co-defendant.

The plaintiff's young daughter, Louise, was talkative during the noon recess hour.

"WHEN I SAW HIM (MEANING LAWYER HOFFMAN) SMILING AND SNEERING," SHE SAID, "I WAS ON THE POINT OF JUMPING AT HIM, SLAPPING HIS FACE AND THEN TAKING HIM BY THE THROAT."

Mrs. Whitehead was early on hand, dressed entirely in black, which made the extreme pallor of her face most marked. Her handsome stepdaughter, Louise, stylishly gowned and generally smiling, sat beside her father and glanced contemptuously at Mrs. Whitehead.

In opening Lawyer Hummel called "Partner" William A. Scott to rebuttal. He was asked regarding an illness of Mr. Whitehead at the Empire City track. He said Whitehead was taken from there to the Ormond in this city, where he lived, and put to bed, where he was visited by his relatives.

This testimony was to the effect that of Mrs. Whitehead, who swore she saw Mrs. Morse alone with the plaintiff in his bedroom.

"I was there, Louise was there, Will Whitehead was there and Mrs. Morse was there," he said.

"Did Mr. Whitehead promise to pay you money for your testimony?" asked Hummel.

"No," she said.

SUNK IN HUDSON; WOMEN IN PERIL.

Collision Tore Gaping Hole in Bow of Glen Erie—Rescuers' Quick Work.

(Special to The Evening World.) KINGSTON, N. Y., April 8.—The little passenger steamer Glen Erie while on its way from Rondout to East Kingston at 11:30 o'clock this forenoon, was sunk in collision with the steamer John McChesney, twelve of the Glen Erie's passengers and three of her crew had a narrow escape from drowning.

At the mouth of Rondout Creek the McChesney tried to cross the bows of the Glen Erie and the collision ensued. The Glen Erie had an immense hoist port in her forward part side, opening in her hold and permitting the water to flood the entire boat.

She began to settle in a few minutes. The passengers, panic-stricken, grouped themselves on the upper deck and shouted for help.

Rescuers were immediately sent to the rescue from the lighthouse near by.

BOY FOUND AT REDBANK NOT M'CORMICK.

Family's Hope Shattered, They Now Think Son Dead.

The hope that lighted the hearts of William McCormick's parents when their son was found at Redbank, N. J., today was not the lad who has now been missing for twelve days.

The boy failed in every way with the description of young McCormick, and Marshall J. H. Ross, who made the first arrest after questioning him and eliciting contradictory stories, telephoned Capt. Titus, who despatched Detective Tinker to Red Bank with one of the Highbridge boys' schoolmates. Before they arrived there, however, the identity of the lad was fully established. His name is William Ross and he lives in Trenton.

McCormick's search for William McCormick in this city and its vicinity was being vigorously prosecuted by the police.

Believes His Son Dead.

William McCormick, father of the missing lad, now believes the boy is dead.

"If he were alive," said Mr. McCormick, "some trace of him would have been discovered. I will not believe he is alive unless his kidnappers send me a piece of his clothing, his hat or his hair, or something that will assure me that their letters about the work of brutal practical jokers."

"I now believe that the five letters I received last week were fakes. I will pay no more attention to anonymous letters unless they contain something to assure me that the writers are in possession of my boy."

Ready to Furnish Money.

"Should I receive a letter with such evidence I will not turn it over to the police. But I will raise any reasonable amount of money, the kidnappers demand and personally follow out their instructions in getting it into their hands for the return of my boy. I am doing this with the police. I am doing this in two days. I want nothing now but the return of my boy if he is alive."

Ultimatum for the Jersey Central and If Terms Are Refused Big Strike Probable.

A general strike on the "Morganeered" railroads is threatened as a result of the troubles between the officials and employees of the New Jersey Central Railroad.

Members of the Grievance Committee of the latter announced today that they were done with Vice-President and General Manager C. H. Warren because of the way he treated their representatives and would not discuss their grievances with him.

They said that the Reading road had been secretly organized, and that after the merger with the Jersey Central on April 15 the men would present their demands to the new management.

MEN ARE BITTER NOW AT VICE-PRESIDENT WARREN.

One of the leaders in Saturday's conference of the Railroad Men's National Board on the grievances of the New Jersey Central men said today:

"Warren treated us shamefully, and we are through with him. He is giving out plausible statements about not having officially received our request for a conference Saturday. He had two communications from us, and replied evasively."

"The third, asking him for a direct yes or no to the request for a conference, was handed him as he was leaving his office. Our representatives, Shien and Harrison, after him, he was leaving the building. He would not read the letter, but told them to put it on his desk and he would look at it Monday."

"We decided then to set matters right, and on April 15, when the road will change management, our grievance men will be present to the new management. We are J. J. Pierpont Morgan's men, and since we overhauled President Max-

CHILD TOLD OF MURDER.

Said Strange Man Killed Grandfather—Kissed Accused.

A new person figured in the murder case of Peter Pasquini, N. J., when Sabatino Pasquini was called on to plead in the police court today.

One of the many witnesses was the ten-year-old daughter of Peter Pasquini, the murdered man.

When Peter attacked his father, according to the witnesses, Theresa, the little daughter, clung to her father and begged him not to hurt grandpa. She told the girl's uncle, told the child to run to her mother and she did so in time to escape the bullets from her father's gun.

She saw her father try to kill her uncle and saw the shot's flying in the air. When Sergeant McInerney and Lord tried to see the little girl to tell what she saw today, she surprised the court by declaring that another man had shot her father.

No instructions were given by the court, and the case was adjourned to Friday when the case will be taken to the grand jury.
